

The UCSC Sociology Colloquium Series presents:

Grad Student Workshop:

“Keys to the Fellowship and Academic Application Process”

Friday
October 10, 2014
12-1:45pm
301, College 8, UCSC

Jerry Flores

Ford Foundation Fellow
UC President's Post-Doctoral Fellow

Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice, University of Washington-Tacoma

This professionalization workshop will address the keys to writing a successful application for:

Pre-Doctoral, Doctoral, and Post-Doctoral Fellowships and tenure track jobs

Flores will address the differences between these application processes and provide an overview of these processes.

Currently working on an application?

Bring in your questions for the question and answer portion.

Jerry Flores' research investigates how Latinas negotiate gender and violence in a California juvenile detention facility and in a continuation school that is connected to the facility. Along with understanding how violence is created in institutions of confinement, his study sheds light on the changing contours of the American educational system. His research also shows how the context of both education and incarceration is changing during this very punitive era. Finally, his work provides a microanalysis of Chicanas passing through the school to prison pipeline. Other research areas include ethnographic research methods, studies of race/ethnicity and issues dealing with institutional and interpersonal pharmaceutical abuse.